

Nagara - Lean Logistics Business Game

Wednesday 1st December (08:30 – 13:00) at Menzies Pinewood Hotel, Manchester
£149 + VAT

Create awareness & understand how to apply lean techniques in your Logistics operations

Intense competition, shorter product lifecycles and evolving processes require continuous review and optimisation of Logistics activities.

Through extensive studies of Business Processes in a wide range of industries, MÖBIUS has developed a business game designed to create awareness and an understanding of the need for Lean Internal Logistics. The game and integrated presentation cover the whole internal supply chain from receipt of goods/materials from suppliers through to the shipment of the final product to customers.

The Game itself:

The Nagara Business Game begins with a sub-optimal (non-lean) situation. Participants play the first round until a structured position has been reached and performance characteristics can be measured.

Participants are then invited to propose improvements which will be implemented and the impact verified during the next rounds of the game. This is continued until a near optimum operation has been reached.

By measuring a number of Key Performance Indicators participants are able to monitor their progress and the game leader is able to provide support to reach higher levels of improvement than have been achieved by participants in the previous games.

During the session the game leader will support proposed improvements by providing theoretical background on the different techniques that can be used to optimise the business processes.

Why attend?

- > Efficient and effective creation of awareness through real life situations
- > Integrated training on Lean theory
- > Team discussions that clarify possible misunderstandings and create common understanding
- > Clarification of concepts such as VMI, kanbans, postponement, etc...
